The 30-Day Routine Tracker

How to use it

Print the grid page (or print several). Write up to eight habits down the left, one per row. Each evening, colour the square for anything you did. Do not chase perfect rows: the aim is a grid that is mostly filled in, with gaps that do not turn into weeks.

At the end of each week, fill in the short reflection on the last page. At day 30, print a fresh grid, keep the habits that stuck and swap out the ones that did not.

Three rules that make tracking work

- Anchor it. Attach the routine to something that already happens every day: after the dinner plates go in the sink, after the dog walk, when the kettle goes on.
- Start smaller than you think. Two minutes of breathing you actually do beats twenty minutes you skip. Grow it once a row is mostly ticked.
- Never miss twice. One missed day is noise. Two in a row is the start of a new habit called stopping. Make the next day the easiest version.

| Minutes spent | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |

Shaded columns mark the end of each week. Colour a square for anything you did, even a shortened version. Write "0" rather than leaving a blank on days you skipped: the honest grid is the useful one.

Week 1

Days done: ___ / 7  Easiest habit: _____  Hardest: _____

What got in the way, and what is the two-minute version for those nights?

Week 2

Days done: ___ / 7  Easiest habit: _____  Hardest: _____

Which row would you drop, and which would you make slightly longer?

Week 3

Days done: ___ / 7  Easiest habit: _____  Hardest: _____

What has changed about your evenings (or your sessions) since day 1?

Week 4 and day 30

Days done: ___ / 9  Total days this month: ___ / 30

Which three habits are now part of how you live? Those go on next month's grid first.

Day 30: tell us how it went

Email a photo of your filled-in grid to info@bioluxelab.com and tell us what stuck. We read every one, and the stories help us decide what to make next. If the kit did not earn its place in your routine, the same email starts a return under our 30-Night Promise.
